Write Killer Copy
FAST Toolkit

Killer Copy Cookbook

The key to writing great copy is to NAIL DOWN as much as possible exactly WHO you are writing to... you need to get inside your prospect's head to a level of detail that's almost as if you're literally reading their mind.

Only by doing this will you be able to truly connect with them in your sales materials.

I promise, this won't hurt a bit...

You need to not only KNOW who you're writing to, you have to be able to FEEL what they're feeling in regards to the kind of problems they want solved and the offer you're providing to solve them.

So... before you start to write ANY sales letter or lead-generation letter, make sure you go through the following questions and answer them to the best of your ability. Fill in the blanks with your answers... and then come back to this and use them as examples for future letters.

Deep Thoughts

Now it's time to consider their deepest thoughts... what are their HOPES, FEARS, DREAMS, and PAIN? These should all relate to the offer that you will craft for them - it will address at least some of these, if not all. Remember, people want to:

HOPES

- What are they're hoping for as it relates to what you can provide?

FEARS

- What do they fear? What's keeping them awake at night?
- What are they doing to deal with the fears?

DREAMS

- What are their dreams? Do they still dream, or have they given up?
- If they could wave a magic wand, what would they want to appear?

PAIN

- What's causing them pain right now - pain that you can help go away?

What Words Do They Use?

Different groups, different industries, companies, occupations, all use specialized words:

- Is there a special vocabulary / jargon used in their role?
- What phrases, terms, cliches, language would help you connect?
- Any RED FLAGS - words or things that could cost you a sale?

What's the BIG PROBLEM You Can Solve For Them?

- What is the key problem you are going to solve for them?
- How much does it hurt?
- What level of pain is it causing?
- How far would they go to get rid of it?
- What PAIN is caused by it NOT being solved?

List and Answer Their Objections

What could cause them to say NO? Make sure to include:

- Why are you charging that amount?
- Will I have time to use it?
- Who else has it?
- Why should I trust you? That's a very important one. You need to make sure you answer that question.
- Will it work for me?

Where do I sign?

Now that you have a market in mind, you need to come up with the PERFECT offer for that market.

I'm not talking -"here's my product and boy isn't it great!?" ... I'm talking a KILLER OFFER that's so insanely superb and packed with goodies that anyone would be a MORON not to take you up on it.

FIRST: Circle which of the following HOT BUTTONS you'll use...

A woman with brown hair, wearing a yellow short-sleeved button-down shirt and a blue skirt, is holding a white notepad and a blue pen. She has a thoughtful expression. The background is a teal field with white dots.

The 10 Reasons People Buy Anything...

1. Make Money
2. Save Money
3. Save Time
4. Avoid Effort
5. Increase Comfort
6. Achieve Greater Cleanliness
7. Obtain Fuller Health
8. Escape Physical Pain
9. Claim Praise
10. Be Popular

List the Key BENEFITS associated with each Feature - put down the answer to the "well, so what!?" question that naturally occurs in the prospect's mind when you list every feature.

IMPORTANT: Make sure as you go through these Features/Benefits that they all relate to solving the core problem(s) you've identified your prospect wants solved. In addition, they should match up with and address some the emotional needs of your prospect.

Complete Your KILLER OFFER

Now that you have all the components of your offer in place, you need to put a tidy bow on it to make sure it's as compelling as possible. Here are the final touches to consider:

What is the FINAL pricing ... not the retail price (i.e., the real value), but the special pricing deal you're going to give right now?

What's the reasoning behind your special pricing? Possible reasons could include:

- This is a special test of a marketing promotion – to see how well this plays before rolling it out to a larger potential audience.
- You had a limited number of slots available and you wanted to completely fill up the calendar now.
- You have some extra inventory of XXX giveaways available and rather than deal with that, you've decided to provide them as gifts.
- You like to reward decisive people who take action quickly.

What drives the URGENCY for this offer? You need to include a reason to act NOW rather than wait... this could be scarcity (“only a limited number of dates remain”) or it could be date-driven (“my accountant wants to wrap up business projections before the quarter ends, so we have a couple weeks to fill the calendar before that”). Regardless, you should come up with some reason to act NOW!

What is your GUARANTEE? You need to provide some kind of guarantee for your services/products – decide exactly what it is so you have that nailed down.

- Make sure YOU assume All Risk.
- Give it a NAME.
- Give it a VALUE.
- What else can you toss in?

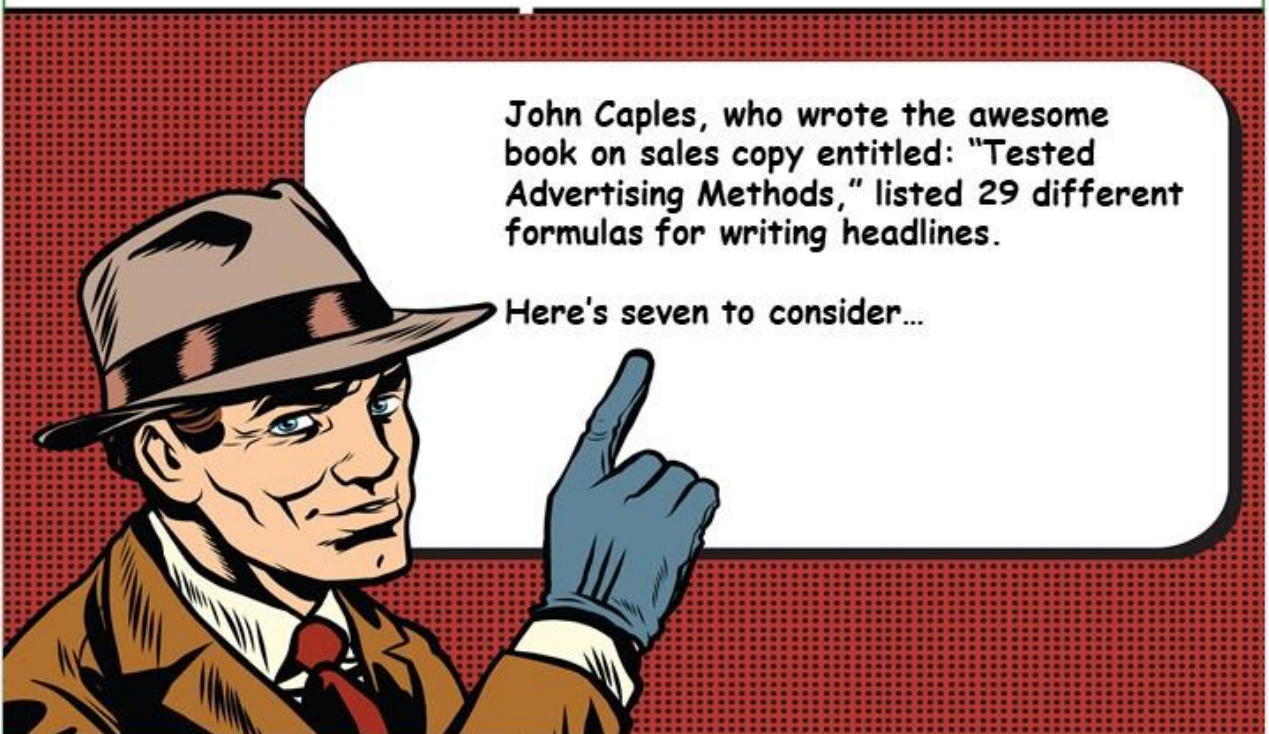

Are there any UPSELLS /Add-Ons? After they say YES, now’s the time to sell something else, preferably related to the BIG Problem you’re solving. List these out and have them ready.

The headline is absolutely, positively the most important part of any sales letter or any space advertisement. The headline will make or break your mailing piece. If your headline isn't effective, if it doesn't get the reader interested in learning more about your offer, you're dead. They are not going to read any further.

THE MOST IMPORTANT PART OF ANY MARKETING PIECE IS THE HEADLINE!!!!

The importance of developing a strong headline cannot be overstated. It will make or break your marketing piece. Sub heads are nothing more than mini headlines that you use in the body of your copy. They serve many useful purposes including keeping the reader interested. They are a great way to summarize the important point(s) of the letter for the person who is just skimming it. Follow the same rules as when writing a main headline and you can't go wrong.

John Caples, who wrote the awesome book on sales copy entitled: "Tested Advertising Methods," listed 29 different formulas for writing headlines.

Here's seven to consider...

1. Begin your headline with the word "Announcing"

Announcing a new car

Announcing new help in solving the housewives' problem

Announcing a new selection of _____

2. Begin your headline with the word "New"

New! Golf clubs specially sized for your youngster

New concept in weight control

New method of keeping your personal finances

3. Begin your headline with the words "At Last"

At last! A steam iron with a "magic brain"

At last - you can drive all over the US without a map!

At last - a toothbrush guaranteed for 12 full months

4. Put a date in your headline

Beginning June 1st ... low summer rates at _____

September Sale on _____

You can _____ by October 31st

5. Feature the price in your headline

Guaranteed 17-jewel quality watches for $129.97

60 Minutes of Comedy, Laughter, and Magic for just $397

6. Feature a Free Offer

Free Consultation

Free Magic Show

Free report reveals

7. Use a Testimonial Style Headline

"Why I cried after the ceremony."

"I was going broke - so I started reading the Wall Street Journal"

Use / Reuse / Rewrite / Model

There isn't any need to reinvent the wheel. Keep your eyes open.

When you see an effective headline write it down and modify it for your use!

(Remember: NEVER copy a headline or any other marketing word for word.)

Over the next few pages you'll discover a TON of different headlines, headline templates, and famous headlines you can model from a wide variety of sources.

They can ALL be useful in crafting a great headline / subhead to be used in your letters, postcards, emails, webpages, and more.

Headline Templates

Take these headline templates and rework them into headlines and subheads for your target market / audience.

Finally, remember this great advice
from Copy Legend
John Caples:

"First and foremost, try to get self-interest into every headline you write. Make your headline suggest to the reader that here is something he wants."

239 Power Words and Selling Phrases

When you're writing copy, headlines, bullets, guarantees - everything in your letters and materials, make sure to remember this key psychological point:

Deep down inside, we're ALL selfish, impatient, self-centered, Homer Simpsons at heart.

Sure, you're a better person than that... and so am I ... but, honestly, not so much. We all would be thrilled and perfectly content to sit on the couch, slug down several of our favorite beverages, and zone out on the tube - if by doing so it would produce reliable, positive results for our incomes, our health, and our relationships.

The core reality is that we all want things EASY, SIMPLE, FAST, and GUARANTEED. We also tend to believe in our own goodness, our own unlimited potential, and that there are forces outside our control that hold the KEYS to success... and all we lack is access to those closely guarded SECRETS - with those in hand, we would be able to live the life of our dreams!

Words that imply or simply state outright these concepts are POWER words and they resonate deeply within. You want to sprinkle these power words and powerful concepts throughout your copy as much as you can.

Bullet Point Templates

Bullet points are basically mini-headlines that relate to specific features and benefits of your program. As such, many of the same templates and basic structures used for headlines apply and can be used with bullet points.

You definitely want to pile on the bullet points when it comes to selling the prospect on your offer - the reason being that there's no way to tell exactly which key points will hit just the right nerve to push the sale over the top. Sometimes a person will buy because of the overwhelming evidence provided by the sheer number of powerful bullets. Other times, it could well be just ONE specific bullet that tips the scale in your favor.

You just never know. That's why you need to deliver a full-blown assault in your copy with bullet points as the ammo of decision.

Key to all your bullets:

Tell The Truth!

This is not only ethical, it's good business. You will have customers who go through your sales letters and double check them against what you promised - so you'd better be willing and able to deliver on everything you say you will.

Sometimes the hardest thing to do with a sales letter is simply getting started.

You've got a great headline. You have an awesome set of bullets that lay out the features & benefits of your program. You know your customer. You know your offer. But you still have got to get past that initial:

Dear Friend

That's where this section comes in - here's a list of phrases to use to kick off your letter. Notice how many of them could possibly be used as headlines and subheads.

Do you see a theme emerging? - that's right, it's what's termed the "slippery slope" idea, which is one line requires the reader to read the next line, which goes on and on and on - every line exists to always push the reader to keep reading! That's what a great headline / subhead / intro will do.

Use these to generate ideas for your letter's opening line.

41 Introductions / Opening Lines

Here's one of those "specials" that we let our customers and friends in on every once in a while.

If you're looking for a quick, easy way to _____, this will be the most important letter you'll read all day!

I'm writing to _____

I'd like to tell you about _____

If you're like me, at times the only way something really "clicks" is when you actually see it done with your own eyes.

How much would _____ be worth to you?

Good news!

Will you do me a favor?

Here's your chance to _____

It's sad but true, _____

If you've ever thought about _____, or wondered _____, you'll be interested in this letter.

This is a letter that's not like any you have ever received or I have ever written.

Pardon me, but let me be blunt...

My name is <NAME> and I know you're busy so I'll get right to the point:

If you're thinking of _____ - DON'T!

As you can see, I've attached a nice, crisp $1.00 Bill to the top of this letter. Why have I done this? Actually, there are two reasons:

Are you tired of the same old _____?

This may well be the most startling _____ news you have ever read.

If money was no object, would you _____?

Frankly, what I'm going to reveal to you in this letter is NOT for everyone.

First, three quick questions for you if I may...

I know. It's hard to find high quality _____ in a budget that's affordable.

If you are concerned about _____, this letter is for you.

I'd like to share with you an idea I'm certain you'll find both strange and appealing...

You are among a large group of _____ to receive this personal invitation.

You don't realize it yet, but in the next _____ minutes you're going to learn the secret of _____.

What would it be worth to you if _____?

Have you ever wondered why _____?

Let me tell you about a remarkable _____ known as _____.

Hold on to your wallets. Like it or not, your life – and the lives of over 72 million Americans – is about to change dramatically.

Have you ever felt like you _____ and _____?

"He's gotta be crazy!"

It's no secret that _____.

Let's face it....

I have uncovered what I believe is the single greatest secret in _____.

My name is <NAME>. I have been a _____ for over ___ years. Over that time I have _____ over _____ and met thousands of _____. Want to know what their greatest regret was?

Would you like to learn my amazing _____ secret that allows you to _____ - Guaranteed?

Do you make these costly mistakes when _____?

Do you want to _____ a lot faster?

If it seems to you almost too good to be true, let me explain.

This is the kind of _____ story I love to share....

Transitional Phrases & Connectors

After you assemble your first draft, you'll do a read through and discover that some sections don't seem to flow together. There's an obvious break between one set of thoughts and the next.

What's needed here in these places is a transitional phrase or connector. Most of the time this can be very simple... a few words at most.

Here's a list of some simple phrases you can use when you need to smooth out the transition from one section to another.

NOTE that these can also work great as the lead ins to lists of bullets.

"And that's just the beginning..."

"And this is just the tip of the iceberg..."

"And now back to the key purpose of this letter..."

"But just don't take my word for it..." - <this is a great lead-in to testimonials>

"By now, you're probably wondering...."

"Here's how easy it is..."

"Here's the secret... "

"So you're saying, 'what's the catch?'"

"In a nutshell, this boils down to this...."

"In the pages that follow, I'll show you exactly...."

"You may be wondering..."

"Let's take a closer look:"

"How do I know?"

"Here's some information you're really going to care about..."

"Here's a small taste of what you'll discover..."

"So, by now you're asking..."

"Here's how it all works:"

"In fact..."

"Think about it..."

"But before we get too far ahead of ourselves...."

"Now let's talk about _____"

"I know it's hard to believe... that's exactly what I thought at first... but... please listen up for just a moment!"

"Well guess what... there's a reason why..."

"And I'll tell you right now... it's...."

"But that ain't the half of it!"

"So what does this mean for YOU?"

"Now here's the problem..."

"Because here's a little secret..."

"Let me tell you why I decided to do this..."

"So here it is..."

Powerful PSs

Do NOT underestimate the importance of your letter's PS (postscript) - this is the section after the headline that gets the most attention. Prospects will very often jump from the Headline, scan the subheads, and then hit the PS as their default way to read your letter. Therefore, your PS must provide both value and punch.

Here are 5 key ideas for what to put in your PS:

1. Make URGENCY clear. You've identified already some kind of reason to respond NOW... use the PS to restate that urgency and impress upon the reader the need to act immediately.
2. Reinforce or Add On to Your Guarantee. The point of a guarantee is to reverse risk - eliminating it entirely from the prospect. YOU are the one taking all the risk, not them. Use the PS to restate this and reinforce it. You might even consider upping the ante, for instance with "not only will you get your money back, I'll toss in $100 to sweeten the deal - I'll pay YOU for your trouble if you're not 100% satisfied."
3. Reinforce Your Authority / Credibility. You can pile on testimonials from happy customers in your PS... if there's even a doubt left, the end of the letter is a great place to add in even more social proof.
4. Surprise them with another Benefit/Bonus. Basically, this boils down to: "Hey, if all that's not good enough for you, then how about if I toss in THIS!" In this case, you pull from your bag of tricks one final, truly AWESOME extra goodie that you'll toss in the mix as a way to make this offer a total no-brainer.
5. Offer some kind of special Deal or Payment Option. Maybe you'll let them pay over time, or perhaps add in a very special surprise fast-action discount, whatever. The point being you can make the deal even better from a financial standpoint here in the PS.

“Can’t Miss” Guarantees

The purpose of a guarantee is to ELIMINATE RISK in the mind of the prospect. You are letting them know that even after they trust you by handing over their hard-earned money, there's absolutely nothing to worry about - you will do whatever it takes to make sure they're happy. A couple points about guarantees:

- First off – OFFER A GUARANTEE! Amazingly, some businesses don't even do this. Big mistake and if you're in a market where guarantees aren't the norm, having one will definitely set you apart from your competition. In fact, in that case make sure to note as a benefit the fact that you DO offer a guarantee... why go with anyone who doesn't?
- In general, the longer the guarantee, the better the odds you won't have to return the funds. 60-day works better than 30-day, 1 year works better than 60-day, and you can even consider a LIFETIME guarantee.
- Consider adding some skin into the guarantee, i.e., with a conditional guarantee (they have to meet some kind of condition – write a letter, return something, etc.) you can give them double their money back. Or maybe an additional $100 or whatever.
- With product sales, you can offer to simply hold the credit card/check for 30 days to let them check out the product first. They get the product, you take the risk. This can be quite effective.
- Name your guarantee. You always want to come up with a clever name for the guarantee, such as “My 100%, Unconditional, Nothing-Up-My-Sleeve Total Satisfaction Guarantee.” Get creative!
- Use these power words in the text / phrasing of your guarantee: No-Risk, No Hassle, No Questions Asked.

Make sure that you stand behind your guarantee fully and completely... even if the customer is a jerk / bozo / moron who received the full benefits of your product/service but still complains... you have to stand by the guarantee. Odds are, if you have a quality offer, you'll never have to do this. But have the mindset in place that if asked, you'll comply.

Here are a few examples of guarantees. Look them over and model them for yours.

- There's absolutely no way that you can lose – except by not taking me up on a free 90 day examination of <product name>. I personally guarantee that you've never heard anything like it. If you aren't richer, happier, and feel more in control within 30 days after receiving the program, simply return it and owe nothing.
- If for any reason you just don't like this product, me or my company, I will refund 100% of your money (minus shipping and handling costs of course). Listen – I'm not interested in taking you up as a client if you're not 100% thrilled and excited to learn what I'm teaching. If I can't help you make a better life for yourself, then I don't deserve to have you as a client. I will treat you the way I wish people would have treated me in the beginning – with gracious trust and the benefit of the doubt. You do not need to give me a reason for returning the material; your word is good enough for me.
- And there's No Risk to You... Then you take 30 days to look it all over. Start working on the program if you like. If it's not everything you imagined – or if you happen to decide ___ isn't for you – return the materials within those 30 days and we'll send you your money back... no questions asked.
- Simply try this program. If for any reason you find out that this is not for you after checking it out, then just send it back within 30 days and you owe me nothing! You risk nothing! I am well known in this business and I protect my reputation like a pit bull protects his home! So if this program won't work for you, then I insist you ask for a refund!
- Plus, you are completely protected by our 100% No-Risk Guarantee. If you don't feel you can make at least 10X your investment... If you don't feel this is the most comprehensive training you have ever received on building wealth, simply let us know and we'll issue a full refund... no questions asked, no hard feelings. That's how confident we are.

Sales Letter Formulas / Templates

On the following pages I'm going to give you some very simple Fill-In-The-Blank sales letter templates.

They're all deceptively simple... which actually is to your benefit. Writing sales copy is soooooo much easier when you follow a proven template and formula.

Remember this key point: It's better to be prolific than terrific.

The goal is to get your sales letters DONE and out there working for you. It's not to work work work until you make something perfect. You will never hit perfection. Write like crazy and get the letter done. Send it out. See what happens. Repeat.

This is the real formula for success.

Sales Letter Formula #1:

1. Headline
2. Opening Paragraph
3. State your Unique Selling Proposition

Sales Letter Formula #4

1. Headline
2. Short opening sentence (2-3 words - Joe Sugarman's "slippery slide")
3. State a major problem that the prospect has. Tease the solution.
4. Why should you listen to me. Credentials.
5. Tease that the solution is coming. "In just a moment..."
6. Testimonials
7. Your results may vary. Answer objection that testimonials are made up.
8. Restate the problem and briefly explain how you are going to solve it
9. Bullet points of all the benefits. Tons of bullet points.
10. And that's just the beginning. Give more info about your offer. In short paragraphs or with different types of bullets. (Finger pointing bullets work well.)
11. Warning about what your prospect needs to look out for in when consider competitive offers. "Do not hire any X if they don't meet these criteria." (You / your product/service of course meet all these criteria.)
12. Tell what the value is of the product (not what you're charging but the total value) and justify the value
13. Give three package options.
14. State guarantee
15. Give bonuses tied with a deadline
16. Give explicit instructions on what your prospect must do.
17. P.S. include a page that says, "Read this only if you've decided not to take me up on this offer." (On web, "click here.")
18. Have a question and answer sheet. This is the place to answer any objections your prospect might have. State them in the form of a question.
19. PPS. Restate offer and add urgent call to action.
